11 MRS. HARRISON'S DAILY LIFE. How the President's Wife Spends Her Time in the White House.

The routine of the day begins early at the Executive Mansion, says A. J. Halford, in an interesting article "on Mrs. Harrisons Life in The White House in the March Ladies Home Journal. Breakfact is served promptly at half past 5 o'clock in the family dining room on the north side of the house adjoining the consevatory. This is followed by prayers, either the president or Dr. Scott conducting devottons. The family then senarate for the day; the president proceeding directly to his room. Mrs. Harrison and the Ladies retire to the "living room" of the house, which is not a room at all. It is the north end of the main hall, on the second door, senarated from the office or public portion of the floor by a rather severe, not to say forbidding black walnut partition, half the height of the walis. Mrs. Harrison finds here her mail, which is attended to with promptness and regularity. So far as the work of answering lotters can be delegated, it is given over to Mrs. Sanger, the stenographer. But a large portion of her mail Mrs. Harrison answers nerself. Many of the lotters can be answered by means of a form that has been composed for the purpose. How the President's Wife Spends Her Time in the White House. of the letters can be answered by means of a form that has been composed for the purpose.

The consideration of her mail over, Mrs. Harrison receives the superintendent of public building and grounds, at present Colonel Oswold M. Ernst of the engineer corps, who is chieffed with the duty of disbursing the appropriation made for the maintenance of the executive imasion. With him Mrs. Harrison discusses the needs of the house and her desires, which must be made to conform to the amount of the funds on hand. Many and long are these conferences, and oftentimes they result in a shifting about and repairing of the furniture and fixtures that would astonish some persons who imagine that the life of the lady of the white house is without care and a continual state of bliss.

After having dismissed Colonel Ernst she devotes herself to the domestic branch of the establishment in conference, and in consultation with the stewart Mrs. Harrison maintains an intelligent supervision over the kutchen, but the stories current in some eities.

steart Mrs. Harrison maintains an intelligent supervision over the kitchen, but the stories current in some cities, representing her as devoting much of her time to actual participation in the work of the department, are exaggerations. Although a good cook, she does not find it necessary or desirable to usurp the functions of that individual in the white house. And so ms to the marketing. Having arranged in a general way for the provision of the day, it is left to the proper person to see that it is procured. Lunch is served at 1:30, but frequently the president is detained by callers, office-scekers or cabinot meetings, and he does not sit down sometimes until an hour later. It is rarely the case that some one is not invited to join in his ment, in a wholly, informal manner—a cabinet officer with whom the president may those continue conference, or some friend who is asked to extend his stay over the hour for lunch.

In the afternoon, for an hour or thereabouts, Mrs. Harrison receives friends, who come by appointment, and who usually have some relative or visitor to present. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Harrison usually takes a drive often with the president, and when not necompanied by him she takes Mrs. McKee and the babies, or some friend who may be in the house. The variations from this programme will include lessons in china painting, in which art Mrs. Harrison displays rare talent and skill.

Dinner is served at 6:30 o'clock, and as was the case at lunch almost always the family is joined by some friend, President and Mrs. Harrison are plain livers, preferring the dishes of an eld Kentucky "aunty" to the more chaorate menu arranged by a French crief.

In the evenings out of the "season," the white house is a very quiet place, President Harrison is free from any social duty, she utilizes the evening hours by reading. Being fond of a good theatrical or operatic performance, she occasionally graces one of the thenters with her presence accompanied by two or three friends. The president has little laste for t them in a delightfully informal way.

Religion in France.

About the religious condition of France a writer in the Congregationalist says: "For the last twenty years the country, so far as its government is concerned, has been constantly separating itself more completely from the influence of the Roman Catholic church. This has marked the decline of all religious faith among the people. But recently the national leaders have begun to realize anow that sicepticism hot only threatens the safety of the state, but of the entire social fabric, and while they appear not to have confidence in any belief they seem to be convinced that any sork of faith is better than none, and therefore they encourage and foster all religions. Last year the national department of public worship paid stipends to Catholic prelates and priests. Frotestant and Swedenbergian padional acpartment of public worship paid stipends to Catholic prelates and priests, Protestant and Swedenbergian ministers, Jewish rabbis, Mohammedan imaums, and Boddhist bonzes, New Year's day President Carnot conferred crosses of the Legion of Honor on a Roman Bishop, a Protestant pastor, a Jowish rabbi, and a Massolman imaum. Even the student of the University of Paris, who, since the establishment of the republic, have prided themselves on their skepticiam, have begin to manifest a new interest in religion, and many of them, it is said, may be found joining not only in Catholic and Protestant public worship, but in that of the jewish synagogue, and even of the Scine."
